Hi Apoorv,

Thanks for sharing the details.

While preparing my earlier summary, I had included only the top seven major expenses we have made as a couple over the last eight years — two houses, two cars, house rent, maids, and our child's education.

Since your sheet includes day-to-day expenses as well, I have incorporated those too. During the reconciliation, I identified a few duplicate entries in your sheet (Sobha and car payment), which were already accounted for in mine. I also noticed entries related solely to your personal financial commitments, such as life insurance premiums and SIP payments. In my view, these should not be counted as household expenses.

I have ignored the following aspects for now:

- Smaller minor discrepancies such as payments to some Suresh Kumar Saini and transfers to our joint account, which you would typically make to withdraw cash using the ICICI ATM card.
- Money transferred to Oorvi's account, which happened for two reasons:
 1. You withdrew some amount from her account for investment payments and later returned it in parts.
 2. The actual amount you invested for her.
 - For point 1, I don't see why this should be counted in your favour.
 - For point 2, the money is safely invested in Oorvi's demat account, and I have never touched it. Still, I have ignored both points in my calculation.

After reconciling everything, the updated numbers are as follows:

R-A amount as per old sheet (updated till May)	30,13,962
R-A amount as per new sheet (updated till Aug)	40,06,672
A's claim of excess	11,96,028
NET DIFFERENCE R-A	-2,03,318
Wrong claims identified	1,46,000	already accounted for car payment & Sobha
	81,528	Life insurance premium & Tata AIA SIP for self
NET DIFFERENCE R-A (after adjusting for wrong claims)	24,210
R's expenditure beyond the top 7 heads	37,33,724	refer rest of the expenses sheet
FINAL DIFFERENCE R-A	37,57,934

Please review the sheet and let me know if you have any concerns.

The purpose of this exercise is not to seek any money. It is simply to address and correct the repeated claim that “Even though I earn more, you pay the majority of the household expenses.”

I am not comfortable with this statement, and therefore I am sharing the complete, reconciled data for clarity.

Regards,
Rupinder Saini
